

5 REASONS NO ONE IS HAVING FUN

AT YOUR COMPANY PARTIES

(And How To Fix Them)

EXPOSURE
PHOTO BOOTHS

1 Go with a live band over a DJ.

If your party has a decent budget hire a band and add some live music. Live performances provide plenty of entertainment and go a long way to remove any chance of awkward silence at your party. Bands are always more authentic and engaging than just another DJ spinning the same old tracks.

2 Location, location, location.

Studies show that employees are physically not able to cut loose in the same environment that their day to day tasks and stress reside.

Instead, consider moving your party down a couple blocks to the local bowling alley or a favorite restaurant or bar. Plus if your party is during the workday you will get a great deal on renting a space out and won't have to worry about big crowds.

3 There's nothing to look forward to

Nothing is more awkward than going to a party and just standing around trying to avoid small talk with "that guy" in the office. People will dread carving time out of their day for your parties if all they offer is cheap food and dull conversation.

Try having a gag awards ceremony or trivia and prizes so that employees can look forward something. Let them know about the raffle by handing out tickets ahead of time. Most of all, just don't take things too seriously, after all, it is a party.

4 Lacking engaging entertainment

Provide your guests the opportunity to physically do or experience something. Hire dancers, live performers, magicians, comedians or an amazing photo booth. You will know your party is a hit or not by using your ears. Either your guests are oohing, ahhing and laughing their hearts out in the photo booth, or they are not.

Click here to book your photo booth.

5 Don't skimp on the quality of food

If there is one thing that will kill a party before it even starts, it's the fear that the food won't be good or there won't be enough. Don't let hangry coworkers ruin your hard planned event.

Make sure you try new and fun things when it comes to party food, like renting a food truck to come to your location or hire a taco bar to set up and serve unlimited tacos.